

2008 FALL HIGH ABILITY COORDINATOR MEETINGS

Designing Program Components for Accountability

You Can't Evaluate That Which You Can't Describe

Presented by: Cheryl Adams of Ball State University

As with highly effective people, highly effective program design begins with the end in mind. This presentation will consider how to design programs so that program effectiveness can be easily shown. We will consider how the elements of program design inform and complement one another. At the end of the session, you should have a roadmap for creating/revising your services as well as documenting program effectiveness.

Bridget Hand and Amy Marschand from the IDOE Center for Exceptional Learners, Office of High Ability Education will give updates as well.
